CLINTON PLAYS DEFENSE

1 Hillary Clinton played defense over her 2003 vote backing the U.S. invasion of Iraq and inched away from President Barack Obama on Syria and the rise of Islamic State militants during the debate. GLOBAL MARKETS

2 Global stocks are set for a short-term sell-off after Islamist militants launched coordinated attacks across Paris that killed 129 people, but few strategists expect a prolonged economic impact or change in prevailing market directions. If anything, any initial damage to economic confidence, tourism and trade within Europe will likely reinforce the European Central Bank's resolve to easing monetary policy further next month, they reckon. That will keep pressure on the euro exchange rate and support other European asset markets. REUTERS

US DEATH PENALTIES

3 Capital punishment in the U.S. has moved into the slow lane, with the number of executions and new death sentences likely to hit lows not seen for more than 20 years. Last year, there were 73 new death sentences, and that number is set to drop by at least a third this year, according to the Death Penalty Information Center. REUTERS

GOP HIT REFUGEE PLAN

5 The deadly attacks in Paris pushed terrorism and the Syrian refugee crisis to the center of the U.S presidential campaign on Sunday, as Republicans hammered Obama administration plans to take in more refugees as well as Democratic front-runner Hillary Clinton's stance on Middle East policy. After officials said one of the Paris gunmen might have slipped into Europe among refugees fleeing Syria's war, more Republicans voiced their opposition to the 10,000 Syrian refugees the White House wants to admit in the coming year. Boston supports Paris in rally on the Common

A quiet crowd of hundreds met Sunday to grieve, show peaceful defiance.

Hundreds attend a somber solidarity rally for France on the Boston Common on Sunday in wake of the recent terrorist attacks in Paris. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

It was a day spent sharing quiet reflections and making gestures of solemn defiance Sunday as a crowd of hundreds converged on Boston Common in response to Friday's attacks in Paris.

The crowd of French immigrants and students as well as many Bostonians connected in some way to Parisian friends or relatives made hand-painted signs, children wore face paint of the Eiffel Tower inside a peace sign.

Many waved French flags or wore them as capes. There were half-dozen or more spontaneous sing-a-longs of the French National Anthem, "La Marseillaise."

Before a brief moment of silence, French Consul General Valéry Freland said few words from the bandstand, where a single French flag had been tied to a railing and someone had lit three tiny tea lights in red, white and blue.

"Today is a day of mourning," Freland said.

> "No matter where we're from, we need to be together."
> Arredondo

"I thank the New England people and their representatives for being with us."

He had been joined by Gov. Charlie Baker, Mayor Marty Walsh and U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, but all stayed silent. There was an intense security detail.

In the crowd were many teachers and students at the French-language International School of Boston, who turned out holding hand-made signs.

Lise Blanchet, history and geography teacher at the school, said teachers planned to talk about the tragedy in "age-appropriate" terms on Monday and to hold a moment of silence to start the day. It would be a grim repeat of the school's response to the Charlie Hebdo attacks in January, she said. But she expected this tragedy would inspire a different kind of conversation — one about senseless violence.

"Charlie Hebdo, it was artists, writers, journalists. Everyone felt concerned in a different way," Blanchet said, a French native from Bellegarde. "It was a matter of principle and freedom of expression. This time it's just death."

She held a sign: "I [heart] Paris."

The crowd marched quietly to Boston's monument to Marquis de Lafayette, where a few laid flowers.

Carlos Arredondo, famed for his role as a cowboy hat-wearing Good Samaritan who helped victims at the marathon bombing, was there. He wore French colors, carried a French flag and held a sign reading "Je suis Paris."

"This is a big family right now," Arredondo said, gesturing to the crowd of several hundred hanging around the statue. "No matter where we're from, we need to be together."

Security beefed up

Officials said there was no immediate threat to Massachusetts following Friday's attacks in Paris, but neverthess, police statewide were stepping up security at hot spots.

For now there will be increased security presence at the French Consulate, at Boston landmarks like the State House, at sports and concert venues, Logan Airport and the MBTA, officials said in a press conference Sunday. Security was especially tight at a Paris solidarity rally on Boston Common, with dozens of police standing guard.

State law enforcement has been getting regular updates from the FBI and Homeland Security since Friday night, officials said.

"We're on top of things," Boston Police Commissioner William Evans said, though he urged everyone to be "very much on their toes" and to report suspicious activity.

Evans said to expect "closer scrutiny" at upcoming events, among them Thanksgiving weekend festivities, the Nov. 23 Patriots game at Gillette Stadium and the Nov. 21 Boston College-Notre Dame football game at Fenway Park. "Get there earlier," he said.

More transit police officers, uniformed and plainclothes, have been dispatched to T stations and rail yards and more staff will be watching monitors for highways, the T and the commuter rail, Transportation Secretary Stephanie Pollack said.

"In the absence of a specific threat, the goal is really to increase both our vigilance and our visibility," Pollack said.

She said commuters should use the MBTA's See Say app or call 617-222-1212 to report suspicious activity.

Painful Varicose Veins & Swollen Legs?

Varicose veins are more than a cosmetic problem. They may lead to complications such as Deep Vein Thrombosis (DVT) and Pulmonary Embolism (PE), both of which claim up to 300,000 lives a year in the United States.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM

- ☑ Varicose Veins
- ☑ Spider Veins
- ☑ Itching and Burning
- ☑ Leg Pain and Cramps
- ☑ Heaviness and Swelling
- ☑ Skin Discoloration
- ☑ Ulcers and Blood Clots
- ☑ Difficulty Walking Long Distances

You may have a condition called venous insufficiency, which left untreated can lead to serious health complications. Our non-surgical, minimally invasive and painless endovenous procedure only takes 15 minutes.

Have you had prior vein treatment and are not satisfied with the results? USA Vein Clinics can help!

Belgium seen central to Paris attack plans, France launches manhunt

Stunned by the carnage, thousands of people thronged to makeshift memorials at four of the sites where the attacks took place.

Police investigating a wave of attacks in Paris launched an international hunt on Sunday for a man they believe might have helped organize the deadly assaults with two of his brothers in Belgium.

The Islamic State has claimed responsibility for Friday's coordinated suicide bombings and shootings, which have re-ignited a row over Europe's refugee crisis and drawn calls for a halt to the ongoing influx of Muslim asylum-seekers.

France said the death toll had risen to 132 from a previous total of 129, with 349 people injured, of whom around 42 were still in intensive care.

Two of the attackers who brought carnage to Paris were French nationals living in neighboring Belgium, officials said on Sunday. One of them blew himself up in the assault, while the other was arrested on Saturday as he tried to cross the border.

Police said they were seeking a Belgian-born man, Abdeslam Salah, in connection with the attack, describing him as "dangerous." The judicial source said he was a brother of the other two men, who have not been named.

Belgian officials said they had arrested seven people in Brussels after two Belgian-registered cars were discovered in Paris, both suspected of being used by attackers.

"The abject attacks that hit us on Friday were prepared abroad and mobilized a team in Belgium that benefited from help in France."

French Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve, speaking to reporters after meeting his Belgian counterpart in Paris.

"I do not want any preachers of hatred on Belgian soil! There is no place for them in Belgium," Belgian Prime Minister Charles Michel said on Twitter.

Police officers patrol at the France-Belgium border. GETTY IMAGES

A judicial source said Salah, a 26-year-old French national, had rented out one of the two cars, a Volkswagen Polo, that was found not far from the Bataclan hall.

In a sign that at least one gunman might have escaped, a source close to the investigation said a Seat car believed to have been used by the attackers had been found in the eastern Paris suburb of Montreuil with three Kalashnikov rifles inside.

Only one of the attackers has been named — Ismael Omar Mostefai, a 29-year-old who lived in the city of Chartres, southwest of Paris. He was identified by the print from one of his fingers that was severed when his suicide vest exploded.

Police seize loaded gun from teen in Jamaica Plain

A frisk by Boston police led officers to seize a loaded firearm from a Jamaica Plain teenager Saturday night.

Officers with the Youth Violence Strike Force had been patrolling near the Bromley-Heath housing development near the Jackson Square T stop when they spotted a group of young men in a "no trespassing area" in a building around 9:30 p.m., police said.

Police found the weapon, a .32-caliber revolver, in the waistband of 18-year-old Fray Silvestre of Dorchester, according to a release.

Silvestre was set to appear in Roxbury District Court on weapons and trespassing charges, police said.

The strike force had been dispatched to the area due to recent gun violence and gang activity, police said.

Jennifer Lawrence talks breakups, marriage

Jennifer Lawrence needs to find something new to define her, following two rather life-altering endings. "[The 'Hunger Games'] movies had been my life for so long and they had to come first in everything. I was also in a relationship with [Nicholas Hoult] for five years, and that was my life. So my life was this person and these movies, and we broke up around the same time that I wrapped," she tells Diane Sawyer. "Being 24 was this whole year of, 'Who am I without these movies? Who am I without this man?'"

So who is she going to be? Not necessarily anybody's wife, as it turns out. "I don't know if I ever will get married, and I'm OK with that," she reveals. "I don't feel that I need anything to complete me. I don't really imagine getting married anymore." Fine, I'll just toss out all these save-the-date cards. Jerk.

The Taylor Swift lawsuit judge is the best judge

There are few things I love more than people who know how to have a little fun with their day jobs, and the judge who had to humor Jessie Braham's lawsuit against Taylor Swift over claims she stole "Shake It Off" from him is a great example of that. She dismissed the case in style, quoting several Swift hits in the process: "At present, the Court is not saying that Braham can never, ever, ever get his case back in court.

But, for now, we have got problems, and the Court is not sure Braham can solve them. As currently drafted, the Complaint has a blank space — one that requires Braham to do more than write his name. And, upon consideration of the Court's explanation … Braham may discover that mere pleading Band-Aids will not fix the bullet holes in his case. At least for the moment, Defendants have shaken off this lawsuit." How was Braham supposed to get a fair trial if the judge clearly has such pro-Swift bias?

DAILY VIDEO

Honest game trailer: 'Tomb Raider'

I'm glad someone finally said it. The Screen Junkies guys take a stab at the "Tomb Raider" video game franchise — or, rather, "the series that taught more young boys about masturbation than sex ed class." You might have forgotten how many incarnations of Lara Croft there have been or how her exploitative curves got more realistic with each upgrade, so enjoy this sarcastic refresher on her exploits, which are "basically the exact opposite of real archeology." One saving grace, though? "No matter how many times they reboot the franchise, it will never be as bad as the 'Tomb Raider' movies." For true.

Spike Lee's Oscar speech is exactly what you'd expect

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Spike Lee will gladly accept your honorary Oscar, Hollywood, but he's not necessarily going to be nice about it. Lee was honored by the Academy this weekend at the Governors Awards, and he took the opportunity to take Tinseltown to task for its pervasive race issues. "Everybody in here probably voted for Obama, but when I go to offices, I see no black folks except for the brother man at the security who checks my name off the list as I go into the studio," Lee said. "It's easier to be the president of the United States as a black person than be the head of a studio. I don't know if you noticed but the United States census bureau says by the year 2043, white Americans are going to be the minority in this country, and all you people out there in the position of hiring, you better get smart because you'll work for us. Reflect what this country looks like."

Charting the 'Explosion'

John Leguizamo says you shouldn't fear a Latino majority.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

HBO's documentary "The Latin Explosion," which premieres tonight at 9 p.m., explores the growing Latin influence on mainstream America, and narrator John Leguizamo has had a unique vantage point on that change over the decades. He just wishes there were some better options for Latinos in the presidential race.

In pop culture in general, not just in music, Latin representation has had an interesting journey. What's your view on it?

We've always been the flavor for a certain amount of time, and then faded out or disappeared and then came back into prominence and then disappeared again. But I guess ever since the '70s it's been a strong influence. Latin people helped birth hip-hop. We had a hand in hip-hop, we had a hand in graffiti. And then playwrights like myself in the '90s and now filmmakers, you've got so many people. You've got Pitbull doing that amalgam of hip-hop and dance music. And in athletics, forget it — baseball is our thing. We're even breaking into basketball now with [Brook and Robin] Lopez and all the other cats.

Do you think any of that has to do with the shifting population numbers?

It's not just the change in numbers, because we've always been a pretty big contingent here, but definitely we've had a chance to move up into the power positions where the decision-making is happening. That's the big change. We're finally being allowed to crack through those glass ceilings and take the reins. We have over a trillion dollars of buying power just in America, forget about Latin America. So that's been huge. And definitely you have a lot more voters. I mean, we have the first two Latin candidates, even though they're on the wrong side.

Ted Cruz feels like the least Latin candidate you could imagine.

He's half-Latin, but he's full self-hating.

I find people getting nervous about a Latin majority hilarious, honestly.

The rest of America, all the big cities have had a Latin presence forever, you know? L.A., Cleveland, New York, Florida. It's the places that did not have a huge Latin influx, they're the ones that are uncomfortable with a Latin presence. But Texas has always been Latin. We've actually been here before everybody else came here. Texas was Mexico, California was Mexico — New Mexico was Mexico! And all those places have our names. Colorado means red in Spanish because of the red clay, Arizona means dry land, California means temperate zone, Florida means flowery state.

What part of the Latin explosion excites you the most?

I mean, you have Lin-Manuel [Miranda] doing the first hip-hop musical, that's a new birth right now. And you'll see millions of those shows coming up next. You have these incredible auteurs, the kinds you haven't seen since the '70s — Guillermo del Toro, Alfonso Cuaron, [Alejandro Gonzalez] Inarritu. You have Junot Diaz, a great, great novelist, a Pulitzer winner. You have so much creativity. We're finally given a chance to express ourselves.

From stage to page

You just released your first graphic novel, "Ghetto Klown."

Yeah, my graphic novel just dropped, and it's based on my one-man show "Ghetto Klown." I found these artists in Brooklyn. There's a community of illustrators, and I brought them my play and they fell in love with it. And I loved their drawing. It was a lovefest. It's a pretty powerful piece — very raw, very honest. My one-man shows are very adaptable to graphic novels because the dialogue is so succinct, each line is kind of like a haiku of experience.

Lou Diamond Phillips fights for his life

The actor plays the most guilt-ridden character in the docudrama "The 33."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Lou Diamond Phillips is dedicated. Like his fellow stars in "The 33" — the film about the 2010 Chilean mining accident, where 33 miners spent 69 days trapped miles below the surface — he spent most of his days shooting in an actual mine. That gave him plenty of opportunities to learn what it was really like for his character, Luis Urzua, aka "Don Lucho," the foreman who had warned his bosses about the deplorable conditions and unmet regulations, then was racked with guilt after the mine really did collapse.

Don Lucho is essentially the smartest guy in the room, though in this case it also means he's the one pointing out, initially, how little hope they have for escape.

It was a fine line for me to walk, because I could come off as simply the naysayer or the foil to Mario Sepulveda [played by Antonio Banderas] and his overflowing optimism and blind faith. But where Don Lucho was going from was pragmatism and realism. He knew the odds of rescue, and he knew what had happened, time and time again, when mines had collapsed.

Lou Diamond Phillips plays Luis Urzua, aka "Don Lucho," the anguished foreman of the 2010 Chilean mining accident in "The 33." WARNER BROS. PICTURES; OTHER PICTURES GETTY IMAGES

You had access to the real-life miners. How much did you rely on meeting the real Don Lucho?

Meeting him was instrumental, but I didn't meet him until we had been filming for two or three weeks, so I had to go on instinct. I had to go on choices based upon what was in the script and what I found in rehearsals. I was incredibly relieved when I met the man, and thought I was on the right track. I had even decided before that to have a more grounded movement — that Don Lucho not only had the weight of his position, but had spent his entire life in mines. I thought he was a man who has had a ton of rock over his head for the majority of his life. That has to weigh down on you. That has to make you feel part of the earth. I tried to adopt that physical sense of myself. When I met the real Don Lucho, I was like, "There it is."

It can't be easy acting in a real mine. How does one get over acting inside a mine and being underground each day?

You don't. You don't get over it. People are used to thinking of movie stars walking away from the set and going into their massive, double pop-out trailer and going to their four-star hotel at night. This was not the case. We did not have trailers; we had storage units with a cot in it — which we didn't see all day, because once you went into the mine, that was it. You came out at lunch and then you went back in. That's 12 to 14 hours a day. And we were staying in a truck-stop motel. That was the best they had to offer — no offense. This was a total immersion into the lifestyle of who we were playing. There was no respite from the commitment to this role.

Tamale pie with romaine hearts

Recipe

MARLEY SPOON

This dish is your favorite childhood chili reimagined with an ultra-creamy cornmeal topping. We sprinkled sharp cheddar and popped it all in the oven for a golden finish. To balance the soft poblano heat, we added a refreshing side of romaine hearts. Seasoned with a healthy dose of salt and pepper and our go-to red wine vinegar for a dash of brightness, they're the perfect cooling match for a warming meal. Cook, relax and enjoy!

Cooking time: 35 minutes
Attributes: Gluten-free
Calories: 515kcal/portion (3 portions - families)

Allergens: Milk

What we send
- 1 cup cornmeal (Indian Head stone ground, 4.5 oz)
- 1 small yellow onion (6.3 oz)
- 2 cloves garlic (0.4 oz)
- 1 poblano pepper (5 oz)
- 2 oz yellow cheddar cheese
- 12 oz ground beef
- 2 tsp cumin (0.16 oz)
- 14.5 oz can whole peeled tomatoes
- 2 Tbsp red wine vinegar (1 oz)
- 2 romaine hearts (6 oz each)

Directions:

1 Cook cornmeal
Bring 3 cups of water to a boil in saucepan. Slowly whisk in cornmeal and 2 teaspoons salt. Simmer until thickened, about 5 minutes. Cover and remove from heat. Preheat oven to 425°F.

2 Prep vegetables
Meanwhile, cut ends off onion. Halve, peel and finely chop. Peel and finely chop garlic. Cut poblano pepper in half, remove stem and seeds and chop. Grate cheddar.

3 Cook aromatics
Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a large skillet medium-high. Add onion, garlic and poblano. Cook, stirring, until softened and starting to brown, about 3 minutes.

4 Brown meat
Add ground beef, cumin and 2 teaspoons salt. Cook, stirring, until browned, about 5 minutes.

5 Add tomatoes
Stir in tomatoes and 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar. Cook, breaking up the tomatoes until most of the liquid has evaporated, about 3 minutes.

6 Bake and serve
Spread cornmeal on top of beef mixture and sprinkle with cheese. Bake until cheese is melted and browned, about 10 minutes. Meanwhile, halve romaine hearts. Mix remaining vinegar with 2 tablespoons oil; season with salt and pepper. Drizzle over lettuce. Enjoy!

The one thing every startup needs

Tech entrepreneur Gabriel Weinberg gives us the big secret behind his success.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Creating a successful startup requires a lot: a great idea, an innovative product, an insane work ethic and a willingness to take risks. But all those assets won't get you very far if you don't have traction.

"Traction is evidence of customer demand, and if you don't have it your company dies," explains Gabriel Weinberg, co-author of "Traction: How Any Startup Can Achieve Explosive Customer Growth."

Weinberg has launched two technology companies: Opobox, which he sold for $10 million in 2006, and DuckDuckGo, a non-tracking search engine that has increased traffic 600 percent since the NSA revelations broke. And he says most self-starters don't think about traction early enough, if at all.

"Startups should be spending half their time getting traction," he says. "If you spend less than that you won't come up with creative solutions — and you need creative marketing solutions for a startup to work."

So how do you grow your audience and get people to clamor for your product? Weinberg reveals all here:

Don't wait until you have a perfect product to share it

When should a new company start thinking about traction? "Immediately," says Weinberg. "What generally happens is people have a good idea for a startup, and they kind of sit in their bunker, producing [the perfect] product." But you aren't going to know what needs fixing until you get fresh eyes on the product. "And the only way to do that is to start trying to get traction right from the beginning."

Create a goal

In order to figure out a method to get people to notice your company, you need to determine some kind of "traction goal." For startups, says Weinberg, that goal can be how much traction you need to raise money from investors, how much traction you need to be profitable or make a certain amount of money or how much traction you need to prove to yourself and your team that this is something you want to spend time on. "And that should be a hard number you can identify," he adds. "Ten thousand customers, or 100 customers, depending on your business."

Test, test, test

So how exactly does one get to this number? Every business is different, so while search-engine optimization (making your website show up for key search results) might work for one startup, another company might do better focusing on viral marketing (getting your customers to refer others).

"Most people have no idea how to reach their market. So you have to test different channels to find the bull's-eye — that one channel that's going to get you to grow," says Weinberg. "Figure out the three best, and run a monthlong test to see which get you the best results."

Once you determine that, the fun never stops. "First you're testing what channels to use, then you're testing within that channel what strategies to use," says Weinberg.

Plus, sometimes a strategy that helped you reach your goal initially stops delivering in the same way. "Then you have to go back to testing different channels. Basically, you never stop testing."

What to look for when testing

Weinberg says tests are designed to answer three things.

1. How scalable is this channel? Or, how many customers do you think it can achieve?

2. How much does it cost? Or, what must you spend to get one customer through the channel?

3. Is it attracting the right type of customers? "Different channels will yield different types of customers, and you want to see whether they're valuable customers," he explains.

3 Major social media players reveal their very first jobs

Everyone has to start somewhere.

What does it mean to be a success? In the days of railroad barons and oil tycoons, it might have meant amassing the most cash possible. These days, the idea of true success has shifted toward the "social entrepreneur" — those who can create thriving enterprises while bringing about positive social change. Here's how a few of the world's top social entrepreneurs about how they got their start.

REUTERS

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Scott Harrison

Founder, charity: Water, which brings safe drinking water to the developing world
First job: McDonald's

"I was around 15 in New Jersey, and applied for the job cold. I ended up taking orders and working the takeout window for minimum wage. They did sweeten the pot with free food, though. Once I volunteered to dress up as the Hamburglar, because you got paid time-and-a-half. It was a pretty ridiculous costume, with a hat so big that it was difficult to get through doors. I was so terrified of getting recognized by my friends."

Blake Mycoskie

Founder: TOMS, a retailer that provides shoes and other services to those in need, and author of "Start Something That Matters"
First job: Doing laundry

"I was going to Southern Methodist University in Dallas and injured my Achilles tendon playing tennis. I couldn't carry my laundry to the basement, so I looked in the Yellow Pages for a company that could do it for me and nothing like that existed. So I decided along with my college roommate to start a laundry service. We bought an old FedEx truck for $1,500. We were pretty successful, eventually expanding to six universities with 50 employees, and sold it after a few years. But I absolutely refuse to do laundry now. I did more laundry than you can ever imagine. At the time it really sucked, but like anything in life, you look back on it with nostalgia."

Jessica Jackley

Co-founder: Kiva, a microfinance site, and author of "Clay Water Brick"
First job: Art teacher

"I always had a passion for art. Where I grew up, in a suburb north of Pittsburgh, there was a little family-run art studio. So after 10th grade, I started teaching to kids as young as 3. What I took away from that job was the ability to teach: to be able to meet somebody where they are and walk them through something new. I am also pretty good at getting people inspired. I like to face a problem together and help them figure out where they want to go."

Pats edge Giants late, now 9-0

Stephen Gostkowski's 54-yard field goal kept the Pats perfect.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Giants swiped a pair of Super Bowl wins away from the Patriots by making more big plays in unbelievably tight fourth quarters. The shoe was on the other foot Sunday at MetLife Stadium as New England somehow kept its perfect season alive, downing New York 27-26.

Stephen Gostkowski's 54-yard field goal gave the Pats the victory as Tom Brady completed three passes to Danny Amendola and one each to Rob Gronkowski and Aaron Dobson on a thrilling drive in the final two minutes. It looked as though Giants safety Landon Collins had picked off Brady to end the game at the start of the drive, but Collins let the ball hit the ground while falling down on the play and it was ruled an incomplete pass.

The Giants had to settle for a field goal on their final offensive drive as Malcolm Butler came up with a huge play in the end zone, stripping Odell Beckham Jr. after what initially was ruled a touchdown grab. New York could not get into the end zone on its next two plays and only came away with the three points.

Earlier in the fourth, LeGarrette Blount looked as though he put the Pats up by eight points with five minutes remaining. A a holding penalty, though, on David Andrews wiped out the score. Trumaine McBride would then burn the Pats as he picked off Brady at the goal line. McBride undercut Brandon LaFell's route and the Giants had grabbed firm hold of the momentum.

For more Patriots coverage, visit metro.us.

Brady finished the day having gone 26 of 42 for 334 yards, two TDs and one interception.

It was easily New England's toughest test to date as the Pats had fallen behind at halftime, 17-10. The Pats will now look to move to 10-0 on the season with a date at home against Buffalo a week from Monday.

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries Don't let anyone guilt you into doing all the work. You may be fast, but you need time to perfect and hone your skills in order to do the best job.

Taurus Your mind will be racing with thoughts and ideas. Don't be afraid to try a diverse range of new or unfamiliar tactics.

Gemini You'll attract attention based on your body language, but when it comes to making verbal promises, don't offer something you cannot deliver.

Cancer You'll have some interesting dreams that you can make a reality if you present and promote what you want to do. Don't hold back.

Leo Temptation is best ignored. You would be wise to take on a physical challenge that will use up your energy and keep you out of trouble.

Virgo If you share your concerns, you will be given the chance to make a beneficial change. Honesty and practicality are your strengths.

Libra Don't let anyone confuse you. If you want something, figure out the best way to get it. Discipline and hard work will be your ticket to success.

Scorpio Help a cause you believe in if you want to meet people with similar life goals. Your efforts will put you in the running for a specific position.

Sagittarius Be the one to take advantage of an opportunity, not the one others use to get ahead. Stick to a budget and don't pick up bad habits.

Capricorn Don't get angry with someone who doesn't do things your way. If you do the work, proof that you know your stuff will be forthcoming.

Aquarius Pick up the pace and veer off in your own direction. Don't follow the crowd, especially if you have your own ideas and goals in mind.

Pisces By helping others, you will end up being helped in return. A choice you make will alter your financial future.
